U. S. Sec'y. of Labor Lauds Safety Record

James P. Mitchell, secretary of Labor, United States Department of Labor, has written letters of congratulations on eight Cone plants' safety records for the year 1953. These letters were received this week by Wallace Bourne, safety supervisor.

They state in part:

"It is gratifying to note the excellent accident record of your company for the year 1953, and I am pleased to join Mr. Frank Crane, commissioner of Labor of the State of North Carolina, in awarding your organization the joint Certificate of Safety Achievement.

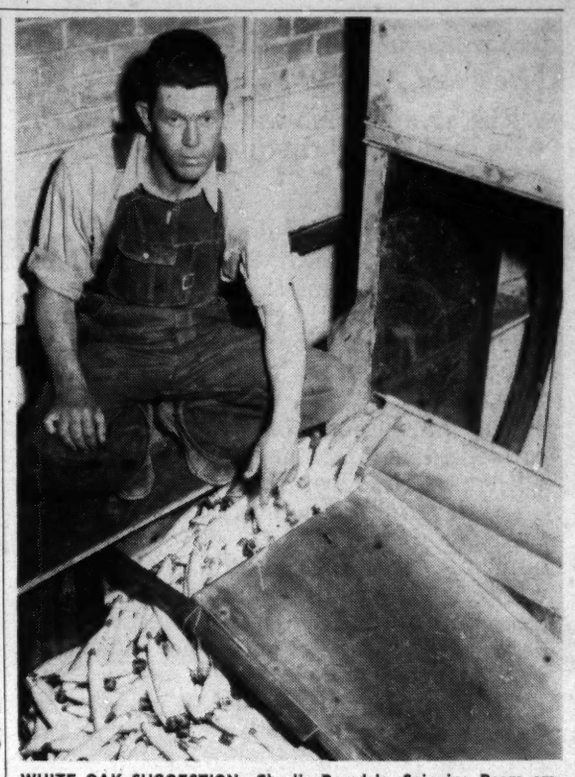
"In reducing the rate of accidental injuries to employees the following plants of your corporation in 1953 over the rate for 1952, you have made a real contribution to the public welfare:

"Tarbardrey Plant, 87 per cent reduction; Revolution Rayon Plant, 64 per cent reduction; Edna Plant, 54 per cent reduction; Revolution Division Flannel Plant, 40 per cent reduction and Granite Plant, 59 per cent reduction.

"Such an accomplishment demstrates that accidents on the job can be controlled and should encourage an added effort on the part of other industrial enterprises to improve their safety records.

"This award brings my sincere congratulations and wishes for your continued success in curtailing accidents in your operations."

Other units in the Cone Mills which received awards were Electricians, Guilford Products and Pineville Plant. Letters concerning these were delayed.



WHITE OAK SUGGESTION—Charlie Ragsdale, Spinning Room employee at White Oak Plant recently suggested that the slide boards in the filling bins be supported with an angle iron. This eliminates the suspension rods which were constantly pulling out and requiring considerable maintenance. Mr. Ragsdale received a cash award from Cone Mills for his idea.

The Power of Nature

There is more than Beauty in this old grist mill that still sits near the famous old Boston Post Road. There is strength, power and dependablity.

Nature's waterpower was harnessed here to convert the strength of Nature's grains into food for pioneering families . . . the food that sustained their efforts to build a strong and lasting America.

The power of Nature has been harnessed in many more ways while Americans were progressing from waterpower to the power of the atom. And the ingenuity of American Industry has turned each development to the advantage of humanity in building a better way of life.

The power of Nature has been substituted in Industry for 95% of the work which used to require the strength of men. This has meant more of the good things of life, far more people, at lower cost. It has also meant fewer hours of work at higher earnings; and more leisure to enjoy.

Understanding of these things . . . and understanding of each other . . . will make possible and even greater usefulness of the power of Nature in building better lives for all of us.

Toastmasters Will Organize Local Club

Many of the men who live or work in the Cone Mills vicinity of Greensboro have expressed a desire to form a Toastmasters Club, and the Downtown Toastmasters have agreed to be sponsors. The first meeting will be a "dutch" dinner at the White Oak Y.M.C.A., Thursday, August 19, at 6:30 p.m. All interested persons are invited.

A demonstration team from the Downtown Club will conduct the program to show just what toastmastering can do and how it can pay off for each member.

The fundamental purposes of the Toastmasters Club are: (1) to aid its members to master the difficult art of public speaking; (2) to teach them to appear effectively before any audience; (3) to train them for leadership and for chairmanship in meetings of all kinds. (4) to correlate Toastmasters training with job training.

These purposes are accomplished through the standard club procedure, which includes speech practice, speech evaluation and parliamentary training.

It is hoped that a large number of men will take advantage of this opportunity.

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST?

Clothes . . .

FOR ALL THE FAMILY $244.39* A YEAR

Yes, the average American family spent $244.39 on clothes last year. Quite a few families could buy their clothes this year for the cost of replacing the spinning frame on the right. How many? What's your guess?

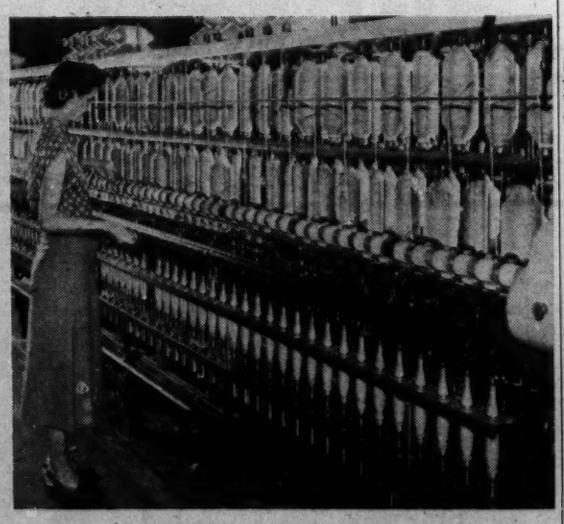
*Survey of Current Business—August, 1953 (Period—June '52 thru May '53)

( ) 12 ( ) 19 ( ) 28 ( ) 30

You were close if you said 28 but the right answer is 30. Imagine how many suits and dresses that would be! Easy to see why when you figure a new spinning frame would cost $7,500.



All Cone Mills 2,500 spinning frames together would outfit 76,722 families for a year if bought today.

New Red Tools Of Psychological Warfare

The atomic bomb was first used in Japan with the idea of bringing a terrible war to a close in the hopes of establishing peace on earth.

Our continued development of the atomic bomb, and later the hydrogen bomb, brought forth the hope that their existence and our preparedness with them might bring the world to a realization that peace is necessary to avoid complete destruction of all civilization.

The harnessing of atomic energy was conceived as a means of providing mankind with one of its most important steps towards an easier and more abundant way of life.

As we abstractively observe recent developments, we are beginning to question whether the results of atomic development here and abroad will mean either peace or devastating war. It could mean world enslavement.

There seems to be a very apparent shift in the turn of events, and particularly as they deal with potentialities during the past few years. The fear of the destructive power of atomic energy seems to have shifted from the non-free world to the free world. The United States and her allies now fear the potentialities of the use of atomic energy much more than do the communist nations. At least, that is the impression that one is apt to get from current observations.

Of course, it is realized that the United States and her allies place far more value upon human life than do the communists. That, in part, explains our growing fear of results of atomic warfare.

As the situation is analyzed further, a most distressing development is detected. Because of the existing fear of atomic warfare, we can note signs of an inclination towards more and more appeasement on the part of our allies.

The communists are quick to sense such a trend, and it is very logical that they will capitalize on this fear to the limit in promoting their program. Already we see signs of a rejuvenated Red strategy.

The free world, therefore, has much to worry about, as it is faced on one side with the fear of atomic warfare which could destroy civilization, and on the other side with the chance that the communists can enslave the world without war by constantly threatening atomic warfare.

This nation and our allies will have to become most realistic in appraising the new Red tools of phychological warfare made possible by atomic development.

Before Walking Life — A Crawl

The origins of 1000 successful men—those who made fortunes or contributed notably to the arts and sciences were checked. Three hundred began life on the farm; 200 were messenger boys; 200 were newsboys in their youth; 100 were once printers' apprentices; 50 started in lowly railroad jobs. And only 50 came from families of wealth. OPPORTUNITY begins with the feeling that you must depend on yourself. —Echoes.

Quite a number of U. S. businesses have been going continuously for more than 200 years. The oldest is a Philadelphia malting company which dates back to 1687 and now is under the management of the ninth generation of the founding family.

DOGS by Tom Farley

In the earlier days when motoring was a daring adventure, the problem of dogs and automobiles was pretty much one-sided. Dogs regarded the sputtering, noisy vehicles as a kind of canine public enemy number one. But, today, millions of dogs enjoy this means of transportation. And this change has wrought serious problems for the dog-owner, especially if his dog does not have proper motor manner, warns Raymond J. Hanfield, executive secretary of the National Dog Welfare Guild.

To be sure that your dog will be a pleasure to have along on your vacation and not a nuisance, Mr. Hanfield sets forth several rules for dog-owners.

When preparing for the trip, be sure to pack your dog's collar and leash, his brush and comb, and most important, his feeding dish. His favorite toy will help relieve the tedium of the drive.

The dog-owner's first problem is apt to be his dog's car sickness. Unless the dog is an experienced traveler, withhold food and water for at least several hours before starting out. Should your dog be prone to car sickness, a veterinarian can provide any of several good preparations.

Don't let your dog move from one seat to another, but train him to ride in one place. If you aren't sure he will be quiet, it will be safest to fasten him securely on a leash to prevent him from leaping out the window.

Don't let him bark out of car windows. And although it looks very sporting, don't let him stick his head out the window. It is a dangerous practice. The dog may easily get something in his eye and the wind is bad for both his eyes and ears.

If he must be left alone in the car, be sure it is in the shade with one or two windows partly open. And remember that although the car may be in the shade when you park it, it may be exposed to the sun an hour later.

If you observe these rules, your dog will enjoy his trip . . . . and so will you.

Health For All

Somebody Write a Book

"Somebody ought to write a book." In spite of his solemn tone, there was a twinkle in the young man's eye. "A book about how not to help your friends who have TB."

It was six months since he had come home from the tuberculosis hospital, and he talked about his experience with good natured exaggeration.

There were the non-believers. "You can't have TB," they said. "Why, you're the picture of health." And when he explained about his X-rays, they said, "Buck up, boy—don't let them get you down."

Then there were the avoiders. They carefully never mentioned his illness, so that he felt almost as though he'd been caught stealing out of the cash drawer. When anything came up in the conversation that had to do with his treatment, they would pointedly change the subject.

On the other hand, he had some friends who were fascinated with his tuberculosis. They wouldn't talk about anything else, and asked him all kinds of depressing questions about his illness. They would say, "Of course, you'll always have to take it easy now," and firmly leave him out of any plans for the future, however distant.

And there were the hearty "We'll - have - you-out-of-here-in-no-time" types. Although he'd told them the doctor had said he must rest for at least a year, they would insist upon inviting him to parties not a month off. They wouldn't take no for an answer.

"I shouldn't be grumbling," he said. "I was lucky to have so many friends. Visiting days were the best, whoever came to see me. But I did sometimes wish people would find more about TB before they came. And some could have cheered me up a good deal more if they had stopped to think how they would have felt in my place."

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS from The Bible

The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork.—(Psalm 19, 1.)

Looking upward to the beauty and the orderly course of the myriad stars at night, how is it possible that a man could doubt there is God? And how wondrous it is that each of us, as each of the stars, is part of a loving God's creation, and of His plan.

A Few Tips On Safety Afloat

Safety statisticians, who don't like to rock boats or toss wet blankets, nevertheless point out to summer pleasure seekers that about 1,200 people a year are drowned in accidents involving rowboats, motor-driven boats, canoes and other small craft.

Carelessess, recklessness, sudden storms, high winds and dangerous water conditions are mostly to blame, although 10 per cent of drownings are caused by unseaworthy boats or motors conking out.

Inability to swim contributes to many fatalities; good swimmers, too, have been drowned because they wore heavy boots or clothing.

"A government can strive, as ours is striving, to maintain an economic system whose doors are open to enterprise and ambition—those personal qualities on which economic growth largely depends. But enterprise and ambition are qualities which no government can supply." —President Eisenhower.

Hurry Hikes Travel Costs

Bert Pierce, automobile editor for The New York Times, reported recently that more than 40 billion gallons of gasoline were needlessly wasted by American motorists during 1953. He quoted a study conducted by the Universal C. I. T. Corporation.

Improper driving methods and poor car maintenance were given as the principal causes.

As we begin the summer driving season let's pause long enough to take inventory of our own driving habits and maintenance methods. Not only will this self-examination pay off in dollars and cents insofar as our automobile operation is concerned, but we'll gain greater composure behind the wheel and our travel will be more enjoyable, as well as a lot safer.

Correct starting, of course, is a fundamental factor in conserving on engine wear. If the choke is hand operated, it should be used sparingly. Starting the engine may be made easier and less gas-consuming by pressing down on the accelerator pedal once or twice. then pushing the clutch pedal down, with cautious use of the choke.

Warming up the engine even in mild weather before moving the car is another wise precaution. A warmed-up engine prevents stalling during the first few blocks of your trip.

When moving from a parked or stopped position, the driver should take it easy, putting only slight pressure on the accelerator until the vehicle is well under way. Racing the engine will cause tires to spin.

Once underway, the vehicle should be driven at moderate speeds. Unnecessary bursts of speed in starting or driving mean wasted power and increased fuel consumption.

Where there are a good number of stop-and-go lights, it's wise to synchronize speed with the traffic light changes. Gas is wasted in allowing the engine to idle for long periods during a traffic blockade or while waiting for a long, slow-moving train to pass.

The thrifty-minded motorist does not allow the engine to run unnecessarily while parked.

Traveling along on city streets or on the open road, there will be times when a motorist wants to increase his speed. The invitation to step 'er up comes when the driver sees a fairly long open stretch, or when he wants to overtake another vehicle. Speed should be increased gradually, not in jerky fashion. A heavy foot on the gas pedal pumps more gasoline into the cylinders than can be used effectively.

To save gas, and to be a law-abiding motorist, one should respect the posted speed limits. On the open highway in North Carolina that means the top limit in daytime is 55 miles per hour. Several thousand miles of rural roadway in our state are further restricted. In these speed zones, the limits posted are those which have been determined after careful engineering surveys by highway authorities.

BIRTHDAY—Patricia Ann Harper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Harper, celebrated her first birthday with a party last week. Her father and mother are employed in the Weaving Department of Salisbury Plant.

In urban areas, of course, the speeds are even more restricted, and the limits have been established to afford reasonably smooth flow of traffic and to protect pedestrians and other users of the roadways.

There are signs throughout North Carolina warning motorists that speed is being controlled by radar. The State Highway Patrol is extending its use of this modern means of scientific detection of speeders. More and more counties are putting radar equipment into use by their county traffic officers, and city police chiefs are looking into the possibility of using radar within city limits.

Highway radar is beyond the experimental stage. It now is an established means of tagging those drivers who show disrespect for speed regulations. Every motorist who prides himself on being a really good driver can rest assured that he need not fear radar. Just as chemical fest for intoxication protect the innocent as well convict the guilty, so highway radar will protect the law-abiding driver while nabbing the law-breaker.

Speeding is the biggest in the list of violations which cause accidents. By cutting speed to below-legal limits, not only will our roads be much safer, but motorists will find the their gasoline will carry them additional miles at less cost.

We have been discussing driving habits. Now, before concluding, let's deal briefly with how car maintenance affects gasoline costs.

One faulty or dirty spark plug can waste as high as 10 per cent of your gas. Check spark plugs regularly. Keep the carburetor adjusted to yield top efficiency too, avoiding too lean and too rich mixtures of air and fuel.

Thousands of cubic feet of air are drawn through the carburetor. In industrial areas, the asmosphere holds sizeable quantities of coal dust and metallic particles, contrimuting to the wear of engine and carburetor parts. Air cleaners should be cared for according to instructions printed on the outside.

Assuming that your car isn't wasting oil through leaks or poor piston rings, there are two good rules for oil. First, a seasonal change means oil change. Heavier oil is the usual rule for warm weather. To be sure oil supply is kept up to the proper level, it should be checked every time you buy gasoline. A second rule on oil is to keep it clean. Check it at least every 1,000 miles.

Another important rule is: Watch your tires! Don't drive with underinflated tires, because they require more pull on the engine and consequently result in more gas consumed.

Keep the battery fully charged! It helps insure starting, it provides a source for good ignition, it saves on loss of gasoline, and it guarantees needed power.

If there's considerable loss of engine power, it may be from a restricted exhaust pipe. The pipe should be checked for sharp kinks or a crushed end. The pipe can be straightened with an iron bar. If it's plugged with mud, it can be cleaned with a pointed stick.

With the exhaust pipe, my time for this talk is exhausted today, but I hope these thoughts may help you pay more attention to how you can drive with less waste of your gas dollars.

August is Accident - Prevention Month!

Planning A Picnic? Then Have It . . . Rain Or Shine

Naturally, you can't know the weather will be fine. But don't let that cramp your style! If it pours you needn't budge. But you can have that picnic, even so. On the porch, in the garage, or sitting cross-legged on the living room floor — with everbody having a whale of a time. So never hesitate to plan ahead for really scrumptious picnic food. Which, to most people, means Fried Chicken.

You know the kind of childish, hopeful look that people get, when you start unpacking a picnic basket? Then, when they figure those wax paper lumps must be cold fried chicken, hope changes to bliss — and repays you for the thought you gave and the trouble you took.

Wienies are wonderful . . . steak is stupendous . . . but fried chicken is in a class by itself. It's American Tradition. Each tender piece has a crunchy brown coating, sealing in its sweet moistness, to eat in your fingers — licking 'em as you go along. No knife and fork treatment can make a drumstick taste as good as the one you polish off while clutching it in your strong right hand.

Of course your chicken must have a crispy, brown crust — the kind you get when it's fried just right in deep, hot shortening.

Just follow these easy directions for your best picnics, Sunday night suppers—and for company dinners, too.

Fried Chicken De Luxe

Makes 4 servings

1 frying chicken cut in pieces
1 egg
¾ cup milk
3 tablespoons melted Crisco
1 cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
Crisco for deep frying

Steam chicken 20 to 25 minutes. Beat egg with milk and add melted Crisco. Add sifted dry ingredients. Beat until smooth. Salt chicken and then dip into batter.

Fry in deep Crisco heated to 365°F. (or until an inch cube of bread browns in 60 seconds). Fry until golden brown, about 7 to 10 minutes.

In a new method of packaging pre-stuffed, frozen poultry, the fowl is wrapped in a tightly fitting plastic bag. Housewife puts the bag into the oven for roasting.

RECENTLY MARRIED—Airman 2/C David Thurman Stutts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stutts, 2315 Maple Street, was married on July 1 to Miss Rosalie Fielder of Novinger, Mo. The wedding took place at Kirksville, Mo., at the home of the officiating pastor, Rev. John C. Fox. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fielder of Novinger. She is a graduate of the high school there and is employed in the Adair County (Mo.) Welfare Office. Airman Stutts has been in service 17 months. He was formerly employed in the Finishing Department of Revolution Division Flannel Plant. The couple are living in Kirksville, where the bridegroom is stationed.

Haw!

Each year about 2 million young Americans become available for employment, while roughly 1½ million workers die or retire because of age or disability.

Color TV sets contain more than twice as many parts as typical black-and-white sets, take three times as long to assemble and test before leaving the factory. That's why initially they will cost between $800 and $1,000.
